- Rev. Canon Kelly Brown Douglas, Stand Your Ground: Black Bodies and The Justice of God. Rev. Douglas' book is divided into two parts. First, she examines the stand your ground culture that took Trayvon Martin's life. In Part two she addresses the meaning of God in these stand-your-ground times.
- Rev. Gayle Fisher-Stewart, Preaching Black Lives Matter, edited by Rev. Stewart, is a collection of sermons in a collaborative effort to answer the question, "What Does It Mean to be Black in the Episcopal Church?"

- Dr. Anita Phillips is a pastor recognized as a leader for her groundbreaking work at the intersection of mental health, faith, and culture. She can be viewed on numerous YouTube conversations and sermons, such as “Body Language: A Conversation on Race and Restoration in the Body of Christ”, <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=W1P6AXjXnXc>
- Bishop Barbara Harris, Hallelujah, Anyhow! A Memoir
- Bishop Michael Curry, Love is the Way: Holding on to Hope in Troubling Times
- Howard Thurman, Jesus and the Disinherited. A classic theological treatise which demonstrates how the gospel may be read as a manual of resistance for the poor and franchised.
- The Rt. Rev. Deon K. Johnson, Bishop of Missouri, “A Covenant to Root Out Racism,” https://www.diocesemo.org/files/8015/9486/8731/2020_Covenant_FINAL_1.pdf
- James H. Cone, The Cross and The Lynching Tree. This book forces us to acknowledge the horrors of the past and to see clearly the mutant forms of racism in the present. Then it shows how Grace upstages disgrace through the power of the Cross. It points a way toward forgiveness, reconciliation and the restoration of the community. Goodreads reported that while the lynching tree symbolized white power and black death, the cross symbolizes divine power and black life.

Books

Non-Fiction

- Ibram X. Kendi, How to Be an Anti-Racist
This book outlines the author's journey to become an anti-racist. His belief is that there are differences between races, but these differences are not responsible for inequalities --- policies are.
- Ibram X. Kendi, Stamped from the Beginning
A definitive history of Racist Ideas in America.
- Robin DiAngelo, White Fragility answers the question: Why is it so hard for White People to Talk About Racism? It is a call for White people to see their whiteness for what it is and to seize the moment to make things better now.
- Derrick Bell, Faces at the Bottom of the Well: The Permanence of Racism. Dr. Bell, a distinguished legal scholar and noted civil rights activist, presents a radical vision of the persistence of racism in America. He writes when whites perceive that it is profitable to deal with Blacks in a non-dissimilatory basis, they do. Discrimination surmounts when they fear a loss or inconvenience to themselves.
- Carol Anderson, White Rage: The Unspoken Truth of Our Racial Divide. This book written by an African American professor at Emory University exams the way African American progress has been halted and repressed. She presents that a powerful cocktail of economic self-interest, fear and hatred on the part of America's white elites is responsible.
- William C. Hawkins and Willard A. Ramsey, The Trail of Truth

- Debby Irving, Waking Up White. This is a call for white people who want to consciously contribute to racial justice rather than perpetuate patterns of racism.
- Isabel Wilkerson, The Warmth of Other Suns.
The epic story of America's Great Migration.
- Isabel Wilkerson, Caste: The Origins of Our Discontents.
The author exams the unspoken caste system that has shaped America and shows how our lives today are still defined by a hierarchy of human divisions
- Ellis Cose, The Envy of the World: On Being a Black Man in America.
Reminiscent of James Baldwin's "Letter to My Nephew," Cose presents a frank examination of the challenges facing black men in the 21st century.
- Stacey Abrams, Our Time Is Now.
Ms. Abrams exposes systematic voter suppression efforts across America and tells us what we need to do to fight back.
- Les Payne, The Dead Are Rising: The Life of Malcolm X.
A Pulitzer prize-winning author whose book is completed by his daughter Tamara. A broader picture of Malcolm's life is presented with interviews from his family and friends.
- Jesmyn Ward, Men We Reaped.
A memoir of her community in the town of Delisle, MI where within four years, five young men dear to her died due to accidents, murder, and suicide.
- Michele Alexander, The New Jim Crow, first published in 2010, the new edition 2020 discusses mass incarceration.

- Martha Jones, Vanguard. Highlighting Black female activism, the author tells how Black women broke barriers to fight for political power.
- Michael Eric Dyson, Long Time Coming. The Vanderbilt professor explains Black anxiety over interactions with police.
- Richard Rothstein, The Color of Law. A timeline of segregation as a deliberate product of systematic and forceful Government action.
- Dr. Stephanie E. Jones-Rogers, They Were Her Property. A focus on the interactions between white women and the enslaved children, women, and men they used as property.
- Carol Randall Williams, the great, great granddaughter of Edmund Pettus, “You Want a Confederate Monument? My Body is a Confederate Monument.” NYTimes Op-ed 2020.
- Emanuel Acho, Uncomfortable Conversations with a Black Man. A former NFL linebacker writes a combination memoir and guide dealing with stereotyping and the N-word.
- William Ryan, Blaming the Victim. Originally published in 1970, William Ryan’s groundbreaking and exhaustively researched work challenges both liberal and conservative assumptions, serving up a devastating critique of the mindset that causes us to blame the poor for their poverty and the powerless for their powerlessness. More than 40 years later, it is even more meaningful for its diagnosis of the underpinnings of racial and social injustice.

- Kristin Henning, The Rage of Innocence: How America Criminalizes Black Youth. This is a vivid and enraging account of how Black children don't get to be children in the eyes of police, politicians, and sometimes their own teachers. Ms. Henning, a star defense attorney and law professor, tells stories in and out of school, of how the new Jim Crow targets Black boys and girls and tears apart families. It is a deeply disturbing look at what it means to grow up as a Black child in a society that fears, vilifies and demonizes young people because of their skin.
- Edited by Westina Matthews, This Band of Sisterhood: Black Women Bishops on Race, Faith, and the Church. A conversation with five Black female Episcopal Bishops on race, faith, and the church.

Fiction

- Colson Whitehead, The Nickel Boys.
Based on the real story of a reform school in Florida that operated for 111 years and warped the lives of thousands of children
- Colson Whitehead, The Underground Railroad.
The author vividly describes the brutal importation of Africans to America in the pre-Civil War era that mirror the unfulfilled promises of today. It is a story of one woman's desperate and fierce determination to escape the endless horrors of slavery and a powerful reflection on our shared history.
- Zadie Smith, Feel Free, a collection of essays which offer a survey of important recent events in culture and politics.
- Anne Petry, The Street, published in 1946, it is a commentary on the social injustices that confronted, Lutie Johnson, as a single black mother living in Harlem during the WWII era.

- Tony Morrison, The Bluest Eye.
A nine- year-old African American girl who is regarded as ugly due to her mannerisms and dark skin longs to have blue eyes.
- Jesmyn Ward, The Fire This Time.
A collection of essays & poems about race written by the most important voices of her generation.
- Ta-Nehisi Coates, Between the World and Me.
The author writes a letter to his adolescent son, attempting to answer questions about race.
